

NEED IT WANT IT

GREEN Drinks

Green is the new black. Officially. What better way to indulge than sipping on one of these drinks, which all have a little bit of green (packaging that is).

← HINT

When Kara Goldin's children reached for artificially sweetened juice and pop she urged them to seek a better choice. "I looked at all the labels and said 'who needs that junk?' Our first product, Hint Water was inspired by a family favourite – ice cold water with a slice of fresh fruit. The trick was figuring out how to deliver that experience on the go." Since the company's launch in 2005 Goldin has found a way to infuse water with fruit flavor. Hint now comes in nine flavours including cucumber, lime, and pear. Just a hint of flavour can add so much.

The sweet clean, pure taste of O.N.E. is one of the greatest treats during the heat of summer. Sipping this drink will take you away to the tropics. For an added quench thirsting experience, freeze a box for 20 minutes until soft ice crystals form. Best of all, California based O.N.E. World Enterprises donates a percentage of profits to not-for-profit organizations.

← STEAZ GREEN TEA SODA

Want to quench your thirst in the summer heat, but not with pop? Steaz Sparkling Green Teas, the best selling organic soda brand in the U.S. may be just the thing. Lacking the cloyingly sweet flavor and artificial ingredients of pop, Steaz has a light refreshing taste. Launched in 2003 by Eric Schnell and Steven Kessler, former managers in the health food industry, Steaz is Fair Trade Certified and USDA Organic. The tea comes from Sri Lanka, where the company supports social development programs.

||||| BOTTLEGREEN CORDIAL →

Cordial is one of those historically charming drinks, whether to soothe a sore throat or mixed into a cocktail. Bottlegreen Elderflower Cordial, containing no artificial sweeteners or flavours is an infusion of hand-picked elderflowers, and a great accompaniment to a lazy afternoon. The elderflower cordial is best diluted with sparkling, or still water. For an extra punch, try combining with champagne!
